AUTUMN 2007 NEWSLETTER

“There is no light without shadow and no psychic wholeness without imperfection. To round itself out, life calls not for perfection but for completeness: and for this the “thorn in the flesh” is needed, the suffering of defects without which there is no progress and no ascent.”

Lee Roloff, Ph.D., Jungian Analyst and Mr. David Hallock Finding Your Own Voice: The Voice of the Inner Poet Awaits

Psyche makes and shapes the images of life into coherent expressions. This phenomena, called the “Biopoetic Impulse,” will be explored in a Friday evening presentation by Lee Roloff, Ph.D., Jungian Analyst with poet David Hallock.

This will be followed by a Saturday experientia workshop of the poetic impulse with Lee Roloff. His approach to the subject is influenced by his experience teaching Literature and BodyThinking at Northwestern University

Lee Roloff, Ph.D., is Professor Emeritus in the Department of Performance Studies at Northwestern University, Evanston, Illinois. There he taught performance art, archetypal, and psychological approaches to literature in the therapeutic setting, and seminars in creativity, creative imagination, and the performance of psyche in culture. He retired from academia in 1991 after forty years of teaching. Since September, 2001, he has lived in Seattle.

Finding Your Own Voice: The Voice of the Inner Poet Awaits

David Hallock is a gentleman who discovered his own poetic gifts in mid-life as a result of deep personal work. David came to poetry in the course of Jungian analysis. Analysis and poetry led David to shift the direction of his life. After retiring from a career in healthcare management, David dedicated himself to writing poetry, an activity that is central to his individuation process.

David participated in the master's program in counseling psychology at Pacifica Graduate Institute and attended the C. G. Jung Institute, Zurich, as a matriculated auditor. Jungian psychology informs much of David's poetry and his experience of the poetic process.

David Hallock is a father and husband with four children. He lives in Bellevue with his wife, Melinda, and daughter, Claire.

AS I RAN I SAW A ROSE

*As I ran I saw a rose from the corner of my eye and twice I thought of turning back. Tomorrow,
when I have time,
I'll take a walk and see the rose.
But I am old, I thought,
still running.
Even when I sit, I run.
I shut my eyes.
A boy I know is standing still.
Under a pepper tree
when I was nine,
after a morning rain,
I saw the skins of pepper pods fluttering down into a puddle sky, red shirts twirling
on pillows of air.
I stopped and turned,
and walked back to see the rose.*

Elizabeth Clark Stern, M.A., L.M.H.C. Writing From Within: Creating Stories As A Road Map For The Soul

How do we nurture our creativity and use writing as a tool for enhancing self-knowledge and personal growth? How can crafting stories filled with fresh images and conflict, help us learn more about our inner life? What is the relationship between stories and the tools of analytical psychology, such as active imagination and the interpretation of dreams?

We will explore these questions in the four-week course, Writing From Within: Creating Stories As A Road Map For The Soul. For two hours each evening, we will engage in group and individual writing exercises and sharing. Together we will create a nonjudgmental atmosphere of playfulness, respect, sharing, and inquiry.

This class is offered for writers at all levels of proficiency. Your desire to participate is the only criteria. Continuing Education Credits are available for mental health/social work professionals with the following learning objectives:

1. Increase the participants' abilities to use creative writing as a tool for personal healing and growth.
2. Develop the participants' understanding of how the dynamics of story relate to Active Imagination and other aspects of Analytical Psychology.

Bring a notebook and a pen for writing exercises, assignments, and journaling.

Suggested Texts: Writing As A Way Of Healing by Louise De Salvo; The Art Of Dramatic Writing: Its Basis In The Creative Interpretation Of Human Motives by Lajos Egri; Active Imagination by Barbara Hannah

Chapter assignments will be offered in each text. Should you choose to purchase them, used copies are often available on Amazon.com. Be sure to go to the Jung Society web site for the link to Amazon. This will benefit the Jung Society.

CLASS 1: IMAGE

Thursday, September 20

Introduction of the course themes, followed by individual and group writing exercises. Sharing of questions and goals participants have for the class. Discussion of the role of the unconscious and the power of imagery in the creative process, as a tool for awareness, exploration, and healing. Assignment: chapters from the texts; writing assignment.

CLASS 2: CREATING A CHARACTER

Thursday, September 27

Discussion/sharing of writing assignment. Writing as healing: a way to know yourself - emotion - memory. Characterization: where does it come from? Protagonist's motivation as the driving force of story. Writing exercise. Sharing. Facets of characterization: behavior, "the want," voice. Assignment: Writing assignment; chapters from texts.

CLASS 3: CONFLICT AND TRANSFORMATION

Thursday, Oct. 4

Sharing of writing assignments. Why is conflict necessary for transformation? When the "wants" of characters collide. The "unity of opposites." Writing exercise. Sharing. Discussion. Assignment: Writing assignment and chapters from the texts.

CLASS 4- Thursday, Oct. 11 - STORY AND MEANING

Sharing of writing assignment. Perspective of Active Imagination. Story as Dream Analysis. Writing exercise. Sharing. Final thoughts. Closing guided imagination.

Elizabeth Clark Stern, M.A., L.M.H.C., is a psychotherapist in private practice in Seattle. She is a graduate of the two-year Professional Seminar of the North Pacific Institute for Analytical Psychology. Prior to her beloved career in psychotherapy, she spent thirteen years as a screenwriter in Los Angeles, with works produced for commercial and public television. She taught screenwriting for Five years at the University of Washington Film and Video School, and "Writing and Therapy" at Antioch University. Her play, Out Of The Shadows: A Story Of Toni Wolff and Emma Jung, was performed in August, 2007, at the International Jungian Congress in Cape Town, South Africa. Her newest play, Nana Sofia's Oasis, will be performed in 2008 through the Northwest Alliance for Psychoanalytic Study in Seattle.

"Every creative person is a duality or a synthesis of contradictory qualities. On the one side he is a human being with a personal life, while on the other side he is an impersonal creative process. As a human being he may be sound or morbid, and his personal psychology can and should be explained in personal terms. But he can be understood as an artist only in terms of his creative achievement."

Psyche's Poetry

To Miguel Serrano, Jung said: "Nobody understands what I mean. Only a poet could begin to understand." In a reply to a criticism by Martin Buber, Jung commented: "I poetize." This presentation will argue that a poetic quality is crucial to a true depth psychology, not poetic in a Romantic sense, but in a Modernist and Postmodernist sense. Jung's view that poetry "needs no meaning, for meaning has nothing to do with art," will be seen to echo Archibald MacLeish's lines: "A poem should not mean / But be."

David L. Miller, Ph.D., is the Watson-Ledden Professor of Religion Emeritus at Syracuse University and is a retired core faculty member at Pacifica Graduate Institute in Santa Barbara. He is an honorary member of the Inter-Regional Society of Jungian Analysts and the International Association of Analytical Psychology. He was a member of the Eranos Circle in Switzerland from 1975-1988, and he has been a part of many Jungian training programs, including Zurich, Kyoto, Los Angeles, San Francisco, New York, Chicago, Toronto, Pittsburgh, and Kansas City. He is the author of five books and more than one hundred articles and book chapters. For more information, see his website: <http://web.syr.edu/~dlmiller/>.

Laurence Hillman, Writer & Astrologer
*Planets In Play: How to Reimagine your Life
Through the Language of Astrology*

Astrologer Laurence Hillman is signing his new book at Elliott Bay Bookstore in Seattle at 3:00 p.m. on October 20, 2007. His new book is Planets in Play: How to Reimagine your Life through the Language of Astrology. He would be delighted to see members of the Jung Society there. For more information please see the Elliott Bay Bookstore website: <http://www.elliottbaybook.com/> For more information about the book, go to <http://www.lhillman.com/PlanetsInPlayBook.htm>.

On October 21, 22, and 23, 2007, Laurence is available for a limited number of readings in person in Seattle. He will be staying at the Windows Art Gallery in Fremont. The address is 4131 Woodland Park Avenue and the readings will be there as well. Please go to his website at www.lhillman.com and sign up early to reserve your time or call him at (314) 997-7744.

Laurence Hillman began to study astrology at the age of sixteen and this has remained his passion for thirty years. He is a full-time professional astrologer, specializing in helping his clients understand their deeper purpose and their life's calling. A force in the ongoing movement to merge astrology with depth psychology, his approach is practical and full of metaphor and Jungian insight. He has lectured internationally and conducted workshops including "Star Cross'd Lovers" and "Mercury at Shakespeare's Globe," and at London's Globe Theatre presented on Shakespeare and Astrology. At the Cycles and Symbols Conference in California, he lectured on "Venus in America" (co-presented with his father James Hillman). He has also taught at Jean Houston's Mystery School. He is the author of numerous articles and is the co-author of Alignments: How to Live in Harmony with the Universe (Lantern Books, 2002).

Laurence Hillman holds a bachelor's degree in Architecture and masters degrees in both Engineering Management and Business Administration. Born and raised in Zürich, Switzerland, he has traveled extensively in more than forty countries, and is fluent in five languages. He now lives in St. Louis, Missouri, with his wife and two daughters.

The Jung Society has invited Laurence back for another seminar on December 5/6 of 2008, so mark your calendars early!

Richard Tarnas, Ph.D. Cosmos and Psyche: Jungian Archetypes, Synchronicity, and Astrology

Lecture & Workshop

Jung began to examine astrology as early as 1911, when he mentioned his inquiries in a letter to Freud. ("My evenings are taken up very largely with astrology. I make horoscopic calculations in order to find a clue to the core of psychological truth. Some remarkable things have turned up. . . .") That interest gradually developed into a major focus of investigation, and in his later years Jung devoted himself with considerable passion to astrological research. "Astrology," he stated, "represents the sum of all the psychological knowledge of antiquity." Insights from these studies influenced many of his most significant theoretical formulations in the final, extraordinarily fruitful phase of his life's work, including archetypal theory, synchronicity, and the philosophy of history. Since his death, reports from his family and others close to him have revealed that in his last decades Jung came to employ the analysis of birth charts and transits as a regular and integral aspect of his clinical work with patients.

Yet astrology runs so directly counter to the long-established cosmology that encompasses the modern world view that one can well appreciate Jung's reluctance to make more public the extent of his use of astrology; he had already pushed the envelope about as far as possible. For the same reason we can understand the resistance of many Jungian analysts to further exploration of the astrological direction their founder had pursued.

However, recently published research by Richard Tarnas, Stanislav Grof, and others gives new support for Jung's intuition of the value of astrology and of the trans-psychic (or "psychoid") nature of the archetypes. These observations suggest the existence of an extraordinarily consistent synchronistic correspondence between planetary movements and the archetypal patterns of human experience, reflecting something like a cosmic anima mundi in which the human being participates.

In Friday evening's lecture, Richard Tarnas will summarize the nature of this evidence, discuss the new light it sheds on the human psyche and the unfolding drama of history, and explore the implications it holds for Jungian psychology.

Saturday will be devoted to a more in-depth survey of the observed archetypal correlations, the relevant principles of astrological analysis, and the new horizon of possibility this perspective opens up for facilitating both individuation and collective self-awareness.

Richard Tarnas is professor of philosophy and psychology at the California Institute of Integral Studies, where he founded its graduate program in Philosophy, Cosmology, and Consciousness. He also teaches on the faculty of the Pacifica Graduate Institute.

In 1991 Richard Tarnas published The Passion of the Western Mind, regarded by many scholars such as Joseph Campbell and Huston Smith as one of the finest histories of Western thought ever written. This work serves as a preparatory foundation for a second book containing a more revolutionary perspective. Cosmos and Psyche: Intimations of a New World View challenges the basic assumptions of the modern world view and points towards a new understanding of the human role in an ensouled cosmos. Based on thirty years of research, this book presents evidence that suggests the existence of a systematic correspondence between planetary movements and the archetypal patterns of human experience. Cosmos and Psyche: Intimations of a New World View won the Book of the Year Prize from the Scientific and Medical Network in England.

*A Way to Orient to Our Inner Topography

"Move from within. Don't move the way that fear wants you to. Begin a foolish project....Noah did." – Rumi

"Give me a place to stand and I will move the world." – Achimenes 287-211 BC

"I enter a swamp as sacred place....A town is saved, not more by the righteous men in it than by the woods and swamps that surround it." – Henry David Thoreau (1861)

Path, enclosure, point, horizon, and edge are five dominate elements or archetypes which form a basic spatial vocabulary which describes ways of seeing, thinking, and being in the world. In this lecture and day-long seminar we will explore a dialogue between the landscape in which we dwell in the outer world and an inner landscape of the psyche and that of the inner shared landscape of analyst and analysand.

The spatial orientation we gather from the environments which we live in and travel great distances to experience, gives us rich clues in our on going dialogue with the psyche. Like a compass, the environment, as 3-D space can be a guide. Each of us experiences the spatial qualities of environment in ways that are as unique as we are, as individuals. However, we must become conscious of how we experience space in order to tap into the creative jewel of psyche that awaits us there. Marie Von Franz wrote that the difference between genius and madness was in the conscious knowing one from the other. One must "stand on a place" in order to "move the world" as Archimedes wrote. Metaphorically and ecologically, Thoreau speaks the truth, "a town is saved, by the contrast of the woods and swamps that surround it." But where does one stand in the town, the woods or the swamp? Each place of orientation offers a unique perspective. Jung himself spent much time on the edges of streams playing with stones. This he regarded essential to his work. The order he gave to these stones came from an inner ordering. "Move from within and begin," Rumi counsels.

The workshop will have two parts: First, we will speak through experiential and clinical material to this outer and inner dialogue. Second, participants will have an opportunity to follow their own journey from an in-depth look at a landscape which has captured them, analyze its quality through two short exercises, one written and one drawn or formed from clay, and then reframe this in the context of an inner space.

At the end of the workshop, participants will have a broader context through which to explore their own clinical and personal vision of the relationship between the space of soil and the space of soul.

Suggested readings are available by emailing Aurore Maren at a.maren@att.net.

Aurore Moursund Maren grew up in Oregon and at the age of four crossed the Atlantic by ship and thus began her fascination with land and waterscapes. After receiving a B.A. in English Literature from the Colorado College, she later attended Oxford University, pursuing her interest in the image of the landscape in literature. She went on to take a Masters degree in Landscape Architecture from Cornell where she presented a thesis on Myth into Landscape in which she transformed the meaning of a verbal myth into landscape forms representational of the myth. She opened her own Landscape Architectural practice and taught courses in Spatial Design at a Community College. During this time her interests in her client's perceptions of the landscape as well as her personal analysis and interest in the works of Carl Jung led her to take a Masters in Clinical Social Work from Columbia. She trained at The New York Psychiatric Institute and New York Hospital and went on to work extensively as a psychiatric School Social Worker. In the following years she commenced her analytic training with the Interregional Society of Jungian Analysts.

After witnessing the 911 attacks, she initiated a program on the NJ Ferries working with persons who had seen the attacks from the water and worked in her private practice with persons experiencing this environmentally related trauma. In the aftermath of Katrina, she self funded her trauma work with persons temporarily housed in the Houston Astrodome.

She now makes her home on an Island in the San Juans exploring the effects of damaged, polluted, or otherwise endangered lands on the psyche.

Larry Kirkhart, Ph.D., & Elizabeth Kirkhart, Ph.D. Lecture: Jung, Psychological Type and Individuation

Objectives:

- Provide a new way to understand Jungian personality functioning using “type” concepts.
- Show a variety of implications of a non-bi-polar treatment of personality concepts.
- Illustrate how type concepts can be related to situational requirements of everyday life.
- Demonstrate how individuation is influenced by personality functioning.

Carl Jung wrote Psychological Types or the Psychology of Individuation and published it in 1921. This presentation will consider the question of individuation and psychological type from the non-bi-polar perspective created by June Singer and Mary Loomis in the early 1980's. Without either/or type concepts, personality functioning can be seen from a Jungian perspective in new ways. Instead of viewing a person as a psychological type, it is possible to talk about a person having type capacities. Instead of basing understanding of personality functioning solely on in-born traits, it is now possible to talk meaningfully about personality functioning as the result of in-born traits AND the environment. Absent bi-polar assumptions, a Jungian approach to personality becomes at once more holistic and more readily understood in relation to the process of individuation.

Workshop: Typology, Individuation and Everyday Life

Objectives:

- Without using bi-polar concepts, understand personality functioning from a Jungian perspective.
- Achieve a basic level of ability to assess the requirements of situations using type concepts.
- Understand how to use the relationship between personality functioning and situational requirements of everyday life to promote the client's individuation.

This workshop will be application oriented. It will seek to bring type concepts into everyday life and reduce dependence on psychological inventories as the principle means of understanding how the individual functions. Using a non-either/or approach, emphasis will be placed on how the various type capacities are used in normal living. During the workshop, a variety of situations will be described. These situations and their descriptions will be created by workshop participants using a special framework that significantly demystifies how personality functioning can be related to situational requirements of everyday life. Exploring this relationship, personality functioning and situations, will open a number of ways to understand stress and issues related to individuation.

Immediately prior to Saturday's workshop (9:30 A.M.), participants will have an opportunity to complete and score the Singer-Loomis Type Deployment Inventory (SL-TDI). During the workshop, the results of the SL-TDI will provide a platform to explore how each person's type capacities are typically expressed and consider how to exploit everyday situations as incremental opportunities for further individuation.

Drs. Elizabeth and Larry Kirkhart have worked together since 1979 doing management and organization development consulting. During this time they have engaged in a wide variety of domestic and international assignments. Currently, they are building ways to support the use of the Singer-Loomis Type Deployment Inventory in clinical and organizational settings. This work has involved two major revisions of the Inventory, conducting research on its performance, developing applications to bridge the results of the Inventory to various settings, and providing qualification training for practitioners. They co-authored, with Dr. Sloane Dugan, "Executive Coaching: A Jungian Approach to Executive Development," Proceedings of International Association for Jungian Studies Conference, London. 2006. 25 pp. (In Press) They wrote "Team Work and the Shadow," Organization Development Network. 1994 Conference, Proceedings. October 1992. pp. 35-64.

Elizabeth Kirkhart, Ph.D., is a licensed psychologist in private practice in Gresham, Oregon. She works from a Jungian perspective and provides therapy to individuals and couples. She is a member of the Board of Directors of the Oregon Psychological Association, and Vice-President of Moving Boundaries, Inc. She teaches a graduate class on Adult Development and Leadership for the Masters Degree in Intercultural Communications sponsored by the Intercultural Institute and Pacific University. Her doctoral thesis, The Relationship of Age and Sex to Psychological Type (1991), was a study of the bi-polar assumption underlying Jung's theory of psychological type. It was based on a sample of over 1,000 Pakistani men and women.

Larry Kirkhart, Ph.D., serves as a consultant to organizations and is the President of Moving Boundaries, inc. He was the President of the Oregon Friends of C.G. Jung and served on the Board for six years. With George Renwick, Ph.D., he teaches, a graduate class called "Culture in the Organizational Context" for the Masters Degree in Intercultural Communications sponsored by the Intercultural Institute and Pacific University. He also teaches an on-line class for Kaplan University's Graduate School of Management in Leadership, Culture and Change. Larry was a tenured faculty member of the University of Southern California for over 17 years where he periodically chaired the Applied Behavioral Sciences Program and taught a wide variety of courses, including organizational psychology.

BOOK SALE

It is time for our annual used book sale. We will have the library open at 4:30 on September 14 to sell many books in order to make room on our shelves for new ones. If you have books you would like to donate to the sale, please leave them in our bookdrop by our door at Room 222, or you may call Bunny and leave a message and she will be glad to pick them up at your place. If you would like to help sell on September 14 or 15 please leave a message for Bunny and she will call you back to arrange a time.

PILGRIMAGE TO PERU

Spiritual Journey to The Andes, Machu Picchu and The Sacred Valley of Peru

April 30-May 11, 2008

with

Dale Golden and Jane Neubauer

In 2006, Dale and Jane journeyed to Peru and the Willka T'ika Retreat Center. This life changing experience inspired them to develop a pilgrimage adventure that others might share in the wonders and mysteries of the Andes and the Peruvian people. On this spiritual journey, you are invited to step out of your ordinary self and into the mystical world of Peru. You will immerse yourself in the cultural and spiritual traditions of the Andes and explore your deeper authentic self. This is an opportunity to reflect on your life, and create a new vision bringing your deeper self alive. This eleven-day pilgrimage is designed to encourage life-shifting experiences and soul discovery through group and individual processes that combine creative visioning, shamanic energy healing practices including deep imagery with animal guides, body centered meditation practices and movement, and sacred ceremonies and rituals.

Through this experience, you will have opportunities to:

- Learn about Andean cosmology, culture and spiritual practices
- Assess the current stage and state of your life journey
- Explore and work with healing energy and creativity
- Work with images, symbols and myths as a means of soul discovery
- Experience and learn tools to live a more soul filled life
- Discover how to integrate this experience into your life

- To prepare for your journey and to integrate your experiences after returning, Dale and Jane will facilitate two half-day retreats at the Creative Leadership Retreat on Vashon Island. For those unable to attend the half-day retreats, self-preparation and integration tools will be provided.

- 20 CEUs available - $20:

The Seattle Jung Society www.jungseattle.org

Total cost is $2,950.00 US per person, double occupancy
$500 deposit - refundable, minus a $50 administrative fee, until December 8, 2007
Payments: $1225 by Dec. 8, 2007 and $1225 by February 28, 2008

Includes all lodging, transportation in Peru, and entrance fees and most meals.
Airfare to and from Cusco is additional.

JOURNEY GUIDES:

Dale Golden, MSW, LICSW, CHTP is a psychotherapist, healer and teacher committed to health and wholeness. Combining years of study with pioneers in the fields of spirituality, consciousness and vibrational medicine and 30 years of clinical experience and teaching, she creatively uses a variety of modalities to support and empower others in their quest for personal growth and healing. Passionate about nature, beauty, sacred ceremony, and intentional relationships, Dale seeks experiences and practices that help embody spirit and live a soul connected life.

Jane Neubauer, RN, MS is on sabbatical from her business, 'The Creative Leadership Retreat', where she works with individuals and groups using creative methods. She has worked as an executive, consultant and workshop leader across the USA and in England, Australia, Eastern Europe, and Mexico. She is currently developing a contemplative garden, studying meditation and yoga, and is passionate about working with clay. Jane hopes her sabbatical will bring a vision for conscious eldering.

LIMITATION OF LIABILITY

These paragraphs define our responsibility as the providers. Providers include Magical Journey, Dale Golden and Jane Neubauer, and the Jung Society of Seattle. Please read carefully. Your signature below represents acceptance of the following terms and conditions.

I will not hold any of the above liable for loss or damage to baggage or property or for personal injury or death resulting from acts, omissions, or negligence of any provider of services or accommodations or due to other causes beyond the control of the providers, or for loss or additional expenses or inconvenience resulting from acts or omissions of any carrier or any other supplier of services or facilities, or delays, cancellations, re-routings and any action caused by weather, political disturbances, strikes, lockouts, riots, war, terrorist actions, insurrections or any other reason. The providers above may, at its sole discretion, cancel or change the schedule of all or any part of any program if it considers such action to be in the general interest of participants for their safety, and I waive all claims against the providers arising from such actions or decisions. The providers reserve the right to substitute guides and alter the itinerary when necessary. All prices quoted are valid at the time of publication and every effort is made to honor the original published pricing; extraordinary circumstances may warrant revisions and Magical Journey reserves the right to revise final pricing when necessary.

I undertake the following obligations. To declare any known illnesses or pre-existing health conditions and to seek medical assurance that it is safe to partake in a journey of this nature; To sign this legal waiver prior to the commencement of services contracted; To accurately and completely furnish any personal information requested by the providers for the purposes of organizing tour services; To carefully review all information furnished about the requested journey; To understand as thoroughly as possible the physical and mental demands of and risks to be encountered during travel; To properly equip myself for the journey; To respect the customs of areas visited and to refrain from antisocial conduct during the trip; To follow environmental guidelines and regulations while on the trip in accordance with the direction of the Magical Journey guide; To always respect the rights and privacy of other participants. At the providers discretion a participant may be asked to leave the tour or may be disallowed from attending specific segments of the tour if it is deemed further participation to be potentially detrimental to the group or the individual participant.

Cancellation Policy: For cancellations received before December 8, 2007, we will refund all but the $50 non-refundable deposit. There is no refund for cancellations after Dec. 8, 2007. Because our prepayments are not refundable, our cancellation policy must be firm. Therefore, we strongly recommend the purchase of adequate travel insurance. We also recommend you not purchase your airfare until we determine and notify you that there is a sufficient number of participants.

I the undersigned will not hold any of the above providers or their officers or agents responsible for any losses or expenses incurred resulting from cancellation of my trip, accident, sickness, stolen or damaged baggage, any default of a common carrier (airline, train, bus, etc.) whether it be a result of insolvency, bankruptcy, or other financial difficulty, or resulting from any other travel supplier-related problem.

Last Revised Dec 2004

Again, no psychological fact can ever be exhaustively explained in terms of causality alone; as a living phenomenon, it is always indissolubly bound up with the continuity of the vital process, so that it is not only something evolved but also continually evolving and creative. Anything psychic is Janus-faced: it looks both backwards and forwards. Because it is evolving, it is also preparing the future. Were this not so, intentions, aims, plans, calculations, predictions, and premonitions would be psychological impossibilities.
